

Corrado Del Bò is Associate Professor in Legal Theory at the University of Milano (Italy), where he teaches “Theory of Justice” and “Tolleration and the Law”. He has published extensively on basic income, property rights, liberal neutrality, conscientious objection, distributive justice and some issues in bioethics (assisted procreation, reproductive freedom). He wrote three monographs on neutrality (La neutralità necessaria. Liberalismo e religione nell’età del pluralismo, Pisa, 2014, in italian), property rights and theories of justice (I diritti sulle cose. Teorie della giustizia e validità dei titoli, Rome, 2008, in Italian), and on basic income (Un reddito per tutti. Introduzione al basic income, Como-Pavia, 2004, in Italian), and an article on conscientious objection and the morning-after pill on the Journal of Applied Philosophy.
